MARCH 2017

Lent can be a really strange time. Lent is as much a mystery to most. Let me try to take some of the mystery out of Lent as well as put some mystery back in for you.

Lent is a time when Christians all over the world prepare for Christ's resurrection of the dead. It starts on Ash Wednesday, 47 days before Easter. You may recognize hearing the term "40 days of Lent". Sundays are still celebration days and thus not counted.

Historically, there are three practices associated with Lent: Prayer, fasting, and giving or works of mercy. It is a time when Christians mourn over their sin and learn again to trust in their Savior, Jesus Christ. Just like you don't only go to a doctor once, in the same way a Christian can benefit from a "checkup" on their faith, to remind them who they are as baptized children of God.

In connection with this, Lent can be a time of great focus for the Christian. Our culture is inundated with input. But in order to focus more on one thing, one must also learn to focus less on other things. In our secular culture, we can see this with the rise of minimalism and simplicity. Great design leads to simplicity, not complexity.

In Christian terms, this is really why we "give up" things for Lent. By giving up something that is a regular part of your life, this allows you to focus more on one thing. For the Christian, that one thing is Jesus Christ, who gave up everything for us, even life itself. So Lent can become a time of beautiful simplicity, hearing again the words of the Bible, and coming to God in repentant joy for what He has done for us.

In our Ash Wednesday service, the reading from Matthew 6 Jesus assumes that Christians will at some point pray, fast, and give. The greatest danger today lies in rejecting these ancient practices of prayer, fasting and almsgiving, because I think I know better than thousands of years of Christian and pre-Christian history. American culture is much more inclined to overindulgence and entitlement than we are to works righteousness. I'm going to go out on a limb and say that for most of us, we could use a little less indulgence, and a little more discipline in our lives.

So I would like to issue a challenge this Lent. Try focusing more by doing less. By doing less, you may find that your focus sharpens and you can see more clearly. For the Christian, that means focusing on Jesus who gave His life as a ransom for the whole world.

Pastor Amen

The cantata Wie schön leuchtet der Morgenstern BWV 1 (How Beauteous is the morning star) occupies a special position in Johann Sebastian Bach's cantatas. It is, deceptively, NOT the composer's first cantata, even though a superficial glance at the Bach Works Catalog (BWV) number gives a different impression. However, in 1852, this was the opening work of the first volume of the first complete edition of his works that was published. This was done on the initiative of Robert Schumann, who was editor of the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik, Moritz Hauptmann, who was the incumbent Thomaskantor in Leipzig where Bach served, and Otto Jahn, an active philologist, (one who studies literary texts), on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of his death. The choice of exactly this cantata as the opening work of the complete edition captures the spirit of the project in more ways than one: it is based on a chorale whose framing verses were utilized unchanged for both the opening chorus and the concluding movement, and whose inner text verses were tastefully and pragmatically modified by a contemporary of Bach so that they could be set either as recitatives or arias. Thus the cantata was not subject to the reservations concerning the "disreputable German church texts" – as once called – that were still circulating around the middle of the 19th century. Thanks to its designation for the Feast of the Annunciation, the editors hoped that the musicians and musicologists active in the Catholic areas of the German-speaking world could be convinced that the edition of Johann Sebastian Bach's works was a matter of national concern. After all, the cantata proved to be a particularly carefully wrought and matured work which fit superbly into the image of one "being used to considering" Johann Sebastian Bach's oeuvre "as nothing but masterpieces".

The present cantata was composed for March 25, 1725; five days later the 2nd version of his St. John Passion was performed during Good Friday Vespers. The cantata thus forms the capstone of the long series of chorale cantatas which Bach had composed since the 1st Sunday after Trinity in 1724, performing during church services. Bach had more time than usual for the composition of this particular work: regular cantata performances in Leipzig were omitted during Lent after Quinquagesima Sunday (February 18, 1725) until Easter. The Feast of the Annunciation, a so-called intermediate feast, was solemnly celebrated even when it fell during Lent, a period that was otherwise free of cantata performances. In addition, Bach had little work with the Passion music in 1725, as he performed the St. John Passion, written the previous year, again in a revised version.

Even though the opening chorus has a multilayered structure, there are, in addition to the usual strings, two solo violins, two horns and two oboes da caccia, which is related to today's English Horn – its effect is one of pronounced transparency. The choir forms an independent layer. The hymn tune is presented by the sopranos in long note values, reinforced in exposed parts by the horn. The remaining choral voices provide the foundation by means of imitation which, on occasion, also take up the chorale melody. The effect of the orchestral writing is determined by the two solo violins and the winds in pairs vying with each other. The opening sections and the interludes are quite substantial. On the one hand, they serve to allow the solo instruments to come into their own and, on the other hand, they are Bach's vehicle for expanding the harmonic spectrum since the chorale melody remains almost consistently in the tonic key of F major.

Movement 2, which Bach assigned to the tenor in recitative, is a paraphrase of the 2nd verse of the hymn, into which the librettist, by referring to the Archangel Gabriel, has skillfully woven an allusion to the text of the reading for the Feast of the Annunciation (Luke 1:26-38).

The soprano aria, movement 3 calls on the believers to follow the path of love. Here, Bach only chose the English Horn and the basso continuo (harpsichord/organ/or piano) as the accompanying instruments.

The bass recitative condenses the chorale verses 4 and 5: Nothing worldly pleases the soul, only that semblance of joy which is sent by God alone (for which the morning star serves as image). The following tenor aria is joyfully elated and paraphrases the chorale verse "Zwingt die Saiten in Cythara" (Pluck the string of the cittern). The mention of the strings, which should sound in praise of the King of Heaven, suggest using the solo violins in this movement, just as in the opening chorus. No wind instruments are used. The concluding chorale differs from the norm only in that the second horn now has an independent part and not one that doubles the vocal parts.

The original score, which may have been part of Wilhelm Friedemann Bach's inheritance, is no longer extant; however, the original set of parts from Anna Magdalena Bach's inheritance has survived and was sold in 1750 to St. Thomas's School and today is stored in the Bach-Archiv Leipzig as a permanent loan. The original set of parts was consulted again for this new edition presented for your hearing.

We hope to see you and have you hear this amazing cantata on Sunday, March 26! We will present it at both 8:00am and 10:30am services.

In His service,
Cantor Jeremy Zieroth

We would first and foremost like to thank everyone who participated in our Date Night fundraiser for our new playground. It was a great success and we are so happy that it worked out so well for our first try! The children had fun having some children here they don't normally get to see and play with and the teachers had a wonderful time too watching them all enjoy themselves. We heard that the parents were also happy to have a night where some of them went out without children, and some of them were just able to run errands.

We have been working on manners with the children this month, saying please and thank you, using a kind voice, and asking instead of demanding. Dental Health month is February, so we will be focusing one of our lesson plans on teaching the children about dental hygiene, foods that are good for our teeth, and others that maybe aren't the best choices. We will also be learning about and reading Dr. Seuss books since his birthday would have been March 2. This allows us to explore feelings, silliness, and so much fun with rhyming words!

We are looking forward to our prime rib dinner fundraiser (March 17th) as well and we are excited to be having the floors cleaned this spring. What a busy winter this has been so far, but what fun we have had too!

Easter bunnies, baskets, and many other items are decorating the shelves this month. The semi-annual bag sale will be Friday, March 24th and Saturday, March 25th for clothes and shoes.

The store is located at 201 Cottage Grove Road (just off Monona Drive).

The hours are Monday through Friday 9:00 a.m.—6:00 p.m. and Saturdays 9:00 a.m.—5:00 p.m. The phone number is 223-1228. Donations are welcome when the store is open.

Members of St. Peter's work on the first Friday (March 3rd) and the third Wednesday (March 15th) of each month. Please call Elaine Podoll if you have any questions or would like to become part of the House of Thrift team.

Thank you!

The February 7, 2016, meeting of the St. Peter's Lutheran Church Council was called to order at 6:30 p.m. by President William Steffenhagen.

Opening Devotion, by Pastor Amen: Pastor read from Acts, Chapter 2. It is a reminder of the first church: how they act and do teaching, prayers, worship, breaking of bread, tending to people's needs, fellowship, etc. That's what we need to do.

William Steffenhagen welcomed new members to the council.

Agenda: The agenda was presented. One amendment was suggested. Under membership changes, the change is a transfer and not a removal. A motion was made by Steven Paskey to approve the agenda as amended. This was seconded by Daniel Schmidt. Motion carried.

Secretary's Report, by Linda Fait: The Secretary's minutes were read. A motion was made by Jennifer See and seconded by Thomas Crum to accept the Secretary's report. Motion carried.
